

Dr. Edwin Lewis Asked to Take Presidency by Milton College Trustees

(Special to the Gazette.)

Milton—Announcement by the board of trustees was officially made Thursday that Dr. Edwin H. Lewis, A.B. Ph.D. Litt.D. LL.D. dean of Lewis Institute, Chicago has been asked to succeed the late Dr. William C. Dahland, as president of Milton College. A committee representing Milton and the college will go to Chicago this week to ask Dr. Lewis to accept. The vote was unanimously in favor of extending the invitation to the dean after several months spent in carefully considering various prospects.

The committee which will go to Chicago is composed of Acting President A. E. Whitford, Rev. J. N. Jordan, Dr. A. L. Burdick and Prof. J. N. Dahland. This committee represents the faculty, community, board of trustees and the student body.

Dr. Edwin Herbert Lewis is 55 years old and was born at Westbury, N. Y., Nov. 28, 1866. He was graduated from Alfred University, 1887, and Ph.D. in Latin at Syracuse University in 1902. He received a Ph.D. in English at the University of Chicago in 1904; an LL.D. from Yale in 1906 and LL.D. from Alfred University in 1910. He was senior teacher and vice principal of the Plainfield, N. J. high school in 1887-1889 and studied in Yale the following year. On his return he took the chair of professor of Latin at his alma mater, Alfred University and married Miss Elizabeth Loxley Taylor, Plainfield, N. J., in 1890. He left there in 1893 to become assistant in rhetoric at the University of Chicago and was made instructor of English in 1895 and associate professor in 1900. In 1902 he became professor of English at Lewis Institute and was made dean of college students in 1906 and continued in this capacity until 1912 when he became dean of the faculty, a position he now holds.

Dr. Lewis was a close friend of the late Dr. Dahland and delivered the principal address at the memorial services held here in November. He is well known in the literary and education world as an author, poet and authority on English. He has contributed to leading magazines and has written various novels and books on English, including "Those About Trench," "The Owl," "Business English," "An Introduction to the Study of Literature," and "Specimens of the Forms of Discourse." The latter has been used for years as a text-book for English students in Milton college.

LEATH'S SALESMEN AT ANNUAL BANQUET

Manager H. J. Leath and three salesmen of the local Leath furniture store attended the seventh annual banquet of the Leath organization, held at the Morrison hotel, Chicago, Jan. 8. Claude M. Navrocks, Carl S. Ashcraft and James L. Stewart were among the 100 employed by the stores in Joliet, Oshkosh, Eau Claire, Dubuque, Elgin, Rockford and Janesville, present.

Following an elaborate dinner at one o'clock, remarks were made by the prize-winning salesman of the recent contest, George Kitteringham. Rockford, won first prize. The prizes were presented by A. Leath, president of the organization, and remarks were made by each of the store managers, including Mr. Leath of this city, and J. E. Cain, Rockford, former manager here. The Inham Jones nine-piece orchestra played throughout the afternoon program and the Colonial theater was attended in the evening.

BUTTER AT LOWEST MARK OF WINTER

Eggs Also Hit New Low Level Here—Other Foodstuffs Priced About Same.

Further drops in prices of butter and eggs this week have caused these necessities to appear on the tables of the homes in Janesville more frequently than when they were at such exceptionally high marks. The best butter now costs about 22 to 26 cents a pound, while a week ago it ranged from 23 to 42. Eggs are down to 20 cents a dozen in places, others selling for slightly higher, while just a week ago prices were 50 and 55 cents. These are for the strictly fresh.

The cut here is caused by the general drop in the market all over the west. The scarcity that had been experienced for a number of weeks has been relieved.

Prices on vegetables and fruits seen in the markets here change but little from week to week and stand this week at the same marks they have been for some months past. Cranberries, however, are an exception, having increased 2 cents a pound in price since a week ago, now being 24 and 28 cents a pound.

Apples are reasonable in price. In places they sell for 2 and 2 1/2 cents and 10 cents each. Oranges remain at 25, 50, 60 and 65 cents a dozen. Grapefruit sells 2 1/2 and 3 cents. Tangerines, common at this time of year for 20 cents a dozen, lemons are 40 cents a dozen and bananas 22 and 24 cents a pound.

The following prices prevail in the vegetable market: Carrots 5 cents a pound; onions, 4 pounds for 25 cents; Spanish onions, 10 cents a pound; turnips, 4 cents a pound; head lettuce, 15 and 20 cents each; leaf lettuce, 25 and 30 cents a pound; sweet potatoes, 5 to 10 cents a pound; potatoes, 25 and 40 cents a bushel.

SUPPORT PHYSICAL EDUCATION BILL

Madison—The state board of health voted yesterday afternoon to recommend enactment by congress of the Presh-Capper bill providing for the physical education of school children between 10 and 18 years of age through state and federal appropriation. Plans for the sanitary care of schools, adopted in 1912, were amended and amplified, especially in regard to water supply and toilet requirements.

A resolution was adopted accepting on the part of the state board of health the provisions of the Sherman-Towner act, relating to the promotion of maternity and infant welfare work. It was voted to authorize the present personnel of the department to supervise the expenditure of the sum of $5,000 made by the legislature for public comfort station construction in cities and villages of the state.

Dublin—A general strike on all the Irish railways was announced for Saturday, because of refusal of the railway managers to discuss a proposal to abolish the regulation wages and hours settled by an award of the national wages board in June, 1920.

BEADS ARE USED TO IDENTIFY BABIES IN HOSPITAL NURSERY

One of the first adornments worn by a number of Rock county babies is a string of beads. For the purpose of identification, nurses at Mercy hospital prepare a bead with the name of the mother. When the baby goes into the nursery where from 20 to 25 babies can be kept, the toys wear the beads.

This system is declared to be safe and fully as effective as taking finger or foot prints as is the practice in some hospitals.

One time last week there were 18 babies in the hospital nursery.

DOW'S BODY WILL BE BURIED IN OLATHE

ments in the mystery of the murder of Dow. The body, which has been traced and is a steel jacketed 45 calibre ball, Mrs. Gertrude Porter, the woman with whom Dow held a correspondence last spring under the name of Harry Donaldson while still was in Janesville, has been released by the police. Dow answered a matrimonial correspondence ad of Mrs. Porter's while she was living in San Francisco and he was still in Janesville. Later he went to Kansas City and met her and has been a frequent visitor at her home since. He obtained the job as gardener at the home of W. B. Pickering, last summer and has been steadily employed.

Where Dow Was Killed Kansas City limits reach along the line between Kansas and Missouri. South of the Kaw river there is a thickly populated section in Johnson county, Kansas, with numerous suburban villages. One of these is Mission Hills, on the state line road, dividing the two states. The Pickering estate is in Johnson county, Kansas, just over the line. Here in front of the garage belonging to Pickering, a rich lumberman, Dow was shot to death about 9 o'clock at night, Saturday, January 7.

Mid His Identity In his effects all the photographs, some 25 in number, with names on the back, showed assurance—all except the photo of the evangelist brother, Edward R. Dow, and James Dow, of Fairbault, Minn.

Mrs. Gertrude Porter, 3518 Roberts street, Kansas City, fiancée of the slain man, said that she did not know of Donaldson having another name. Mrs. Porter said she had noticed Donaldson was nervous or worried on his recent visit to her home. She recalled that afternoon when leaving her home about 11 o'clock on Saturday night, he would run from the house to the car line on Independence avenue. She never questioned him regarding his actions.

"Donaldson" Was Watched One night last summer, just after Donaldson had left her home, Mrs. Porter said, a strange man attempted to gain entrance to the house by crawling through a pantry window. Several nights later, she asserted, noises were heard at a side door, and in the morning the door was found partly open. Whether Donaldson was being watched, Mrs. Porter does not know.

When Dow left Janesville it is charged he took with him the accumulated savings of himself and wife in Liberty bonds and money. In his effects were found bank slips showing deposits of $1,000 in Kansas City banks. Mrs. Dow will ask to be appointed administrator of the estate and the funds will be turned over to pay the expenses of the burial. O. W. Arlow, who accompanied Mrs. Dow to Kansas, will visit relatives close by Olathe and make a call on the Rev. F. F. Lewis at Ottawa, which city is only a short ride from there.

MORMON JOE DIED WITH BOOTS ON

Real Life Man of Mystery. Story Book Hero, Met Fiction Fate.

Mormon Joe, Wyoming's man of mystery, story book hero, made famous by Caroline Lockhart in her thrilling Western tale of "The Kidnapping of the Sheepherder," died in real life recently just about as he died in the story book—with his boots on and a bullet through his heart. He was killed in a gambling den at Kirby, Wyo., last night because he refused to play a crooked game of dice.

In appearance, Mormon Joe was a typical trapper and sheepherder, with all that the appearance means. In fact, he was a college graduate, his official name was "James Smith," but no one ever called him by that name. He was known as "Mormon Joe" because of his association with the hero of her Western story. With his sheep dog, Mormon Joe followed the sheep into the solitary places on the edge of the mountains, sometimes not seeing a human face for weeks at a time. Then, with the wages of months in his pocket, he returned to the town, and in a pre-arranged place, he sold his money at the gambling table.

A Always Correct in Speech. Changing his occupation for a winter, Mormon Joe came to Kirby for a winter, following his line of traps into the wildest parts of the mountains. But when his furs were disposed of, the result was a small sum. The gambling table, in a few hours, took his earnings of an entire winter.

But when Mormon Joe spoke he used absolutely correct language. His speech never degenerated as did his appearance and morals. He was always the college graduate in speech, if not in looks.

It is True to Form. In her story, Miss Lockhart made her hero absolutely straight. In life the hero was shot because he refused to play a crooked game. Mormon Joe came into Kirby from three months in the mountains, and during those three months he had been scarcely a soul. He wanted relaxation and excitement. So he went to Henry Bruce's gambling house.

Here is the story of the end of Mormon Joe, as told by a Wyoming local newspaper:

"After having killed James Smith at Kirby, twenty miles north of Casper, Henry Bruce's conscience evidently bothered him, for he asked a friend to call Sheriff Holdrege at Thermopolis with the result that Smith's body was found dead in Bruce's gambling hall with a $10 bill clamped in his hand.

Refused to Play Crooked. "Smith started gambling at Bruce's game, Bruce became dissatisfied with the amount of money being taken in on craps. He ordered Smith to change the dice. This Smith refused to do. At midnight, after ending when Bruce opened fire, shooting Smith eight times in the body. Just before the gunplay started, Bruce had paid Smith $10. He was shooting the gambler, who was dead when the shooting was over. Bruce was going over to Sam Kelly's residence. Then he asked that the authorities be notified. When the sheriff came, Bruce surrendered. The sheriff's verdict was that Smith came to his death by gunshot wounds and recommended that Bruce be held for trial on a charge of first degree murder."

That was all the killing of "Mormon Joe" was "worth" in his home town. No matter how great a hero he was between the covers of a story book, he was just a sheepherder with a past in the country where he lived.

The Story Book Joe had an old violin which he carried with him in the mess wagon. At night, after the sheep had settled down under the shining stars, the sheepherder with a past would bring out the old fiddle from which he would draw strains from the western ballads which he claimed the travel-stained sheepherder in his faded overalls and limp rimmed peak crowned hat another of the incomparables of the far West. That was the way the story book Joe lived, and like the latter, he died with his boots on.

GAZETTE BUREAU CONTINUES POPULAR

Information concerning the possibility of obtaining a position with the custom service can be obtained by writing to J. H. Haskin, of the Gazette Information Bureau at Washington, D. C. to a Gazette reader, from the collector of customs at Milwaukee. The custom service, he states, comes under the civil service.

Mr. Haskin also gave out, last week, information concerning the raising of bees and tanning of hides. Ten booklets were issued concerning the operation of home heating plants. Three Pan-American maps were sent out.

Edgerton

Edgerton—James Murphy, formerly a farmer near Edgerton, is dead at the home of a niece in Minnesota, according to a word received here. Mr. Murphy had lived near here all his life until a year ago, when failing health compelled him to retire. The body will be brought to Edgerton for burial in the Catholic cemetery.

The honor roll board, which has been standing on railroad ground just east of the C. E. Sweeney & Sons Lumber yard, was removed and containing the names of more than 300 soldiers and sailors of the World war, was removed Thursday.

About 50 business men of the city attended the removal of the statue. St. Rose society of the Catholic church will hold a rummage sale next week in the building formerly occupied by the army goods store.

True Detective Stories

THE DOUBLE CRIME

It was in the late summer of 1903 that the New York police discovered the body of a man, evidently an Italian, concealed in a barrel on the East side. Every mark possibly suggesting his identity had been removed—even the labels had been clipped from his clothes—and the manner in which his face had been mutilated rendered him totally unrecognizable.

But, just as the case was about to be entered upon the book of New York's unsolved mysteries, it was cleared up through a coincidence so startling that no writer of detective fiction would have dared make use of it.

On the night of the murder, William J. Flynn, then chief of the Eastern division of the United States secret service, with headquarters in New York, was working on one of the numerous counterfeiting cases which occur so frequently in the Italian section of the metropolis.

Flynn himself was elected to trail a pair of Italians whom he had reason to believe were working for or with the counterfeiter. The trail led to an Italian grocery store, where, from the shadow of a doorway across the street, the government detective could see in the lighted room in the suspected house. A few minutes later a covered wagon drew up in front of the house, a man got out, entered the grocery, and after a few minutes he came out. Flynn was watching. The light from the lamp fell directly upon his face, and the secret service operative realized that he must be a new addition to the gang. He was certainly no one that he had seen before. Then the curtains to the window were drawn, and Flynn abandoned his chase for the day.

The next morning, nearly half a mile from the place where Flynn had hidden himself the night before, it was several days later that the operative and noted that the body had been found in a sugar barrel, partly filled with blood-stained sawdust. The date of the murder, coupled with the fact that the body was found in a sugar barrel, recalled to the operative's mind the fact that he had been watching an Italian grocery at about the time that the foreigner had been killed. There was no connection between the counterfeiter and the murdered man, Flynn went to the morgue and examined the body. The peculiar shape of the face, the manner in which the hair sprang out above the prominent ears and the blood-stained green which had been found in the barrel, told the story beyond the shadow of a doubt. It was the stranger whom Flynn had seen entering the store which he had been watching!

Feeling certain that there was a link which pointed toward the operative, Flynn had the body photographed from a number of angles, while experts in physiognomy reconstructed the features to something approaching a lifelike appearance. Then, armed with these most-mortal pictures, Flynn took a trip to Ossining to see if any of the members of the Italian colony in Sing Sing could identify the dead man.

The idea proved to be a good one. For a convict whom Flynn knew—an Italian serving time for another counterfeiting case—identified the photograph as being those of his brother-in-law, Marianna Donatello, whom he described as being a peaceful, hard-working citizen who had never been implicated in any of the crimes of the Italian settlement.

Working backward from this clue, Flynn and the other secret service operatives trailed the Italians whom the chief had seen in the grocery store on the night of the murder, and it was not long before they had made a complete roundup of the gang. As was to be expected in a crime of this nature, alibis were plentiful, but, as was usual, these were none too well supported by fact, and it was a comparatively simple matter for the police to get at the bottom of the case, once the identity of the victim had been established.

A judicious application of the "third degree" brought to light the fact that Donatello had been killed because he had gotten wind of the counterfeiting plot, and because he was the brother-in-law of the man who later identified the body of a man who had incurred the undying enmity of his compatriots by turning state's evidence. The inflexible laws of the society to which they both belonged—one of the societies which rules Little Italy with a rule of iron and a hand of blood—demanded the sacrifice of the next of kin in the event of information being given to the police.

But if Flynn had not happened to be watching the grocery store on the night of the murder the chances are that the crime would still be unsolved. The leader of the "murder gang" was found to be Ignazio Lupo, one of the very men Flynn was after, but the government allowed the counterfeiting charge to hang fire until the expiration of Lupo's term for manslaughter. Another Lupo, brother to Ignazio, escaped at the time, and was not captured until 10 years later, although Flynn and his associates were on the lookout for him all that time.

Don't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it tends to scald and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified coconut oil shampoo for this is pure and contains nothing else at all. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dirt, dust and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

tense devotion and the aid of a tutor, George Bailey.

The dejected figure sprang into action. Without weighing his sacrifice, without letting himself think of the risks of a hurried dash or of another tumble, George shot the ball across, then forged ahead and put the Yale quarterback out of the play. While Goodhue strode across the line and set the ball down behind the goal posts.

As he went back to kick the goal George heard through the crashing cacophony from the stands Goodhue's uncanny voice from the goal posts.

"Why didn't you make that touchdown yourself? It was yours. You had it. You had earned it."

"It was the team's," George answered, shrug. "I might have been swilled. Sure thing for you."

"You precious idiot," Goodhue whispered.

As George kicked the goal there came to him again, across his brain, that sensation of being on a road he had not consciously set out to explore.

He wondered why he was so well content.

With the whistle and crumpling of the hem George staggered to his feet. Goodhue and another player supported him while the team clustered for a cheer.

The Princeton stands were a terrific avalanche descending upon that little group. George tried to rescue him, shouting out his condition; but the avalanche wouldn't hear it. It dashed upon him, tossed him shoulder high, while it emitted crashing noises out of which his name emerged.

Goodhue was up, and the others shouldered at the head of their cheering procession. His dazed brain understood that they desired to honour the man who had done the game's share, the one who had made the game possible, and he sensed a wrong, a sublime ignorance of indifference that they should carry only him. The victory went back to George Morton.

He went down, screaming into the ears of his bearers.

"Squibs Bailey! I found me! It wasn't for him I wouldn't have played today. Bailey, or let me down! Bailey made that run! I tell you, Bailey played that game!"

In his earnestness he grew hysterical.

Maybe it was because they wanted to honour the hero, or perhaps they caught his own hysteria, realizing what Bailey had done for him. They stopped in front of the stands to which Bailey's feet had led.

George waved his hands, holding the column until the slender figure, urged by the spectators remaining in the stands, came down with difficulty and embarrassment to be caught and lifted tenderly up beside George.

Then, with these two aloft in the very front of the wild march was the slender figure of the Yale goal posts while Squibs wrinkled face twitched, while in his young eyes burned the unsurpassable light of a hopeless wish miraculously come true.

Green rescued George when his head was drooping and his eyes blurred. He got him to the gymnasium and stretched him out there and set the doctors to work on his head. A voice got into George's brain.

Who was talking? Was it Goodhue or Squibs?

"I guess you can see him, but he's pretty vague. Played the whole game with a broken head. Lied to the doctors."

George forced his eyes open. Lambert Planter, still in his stained football clothes, bent over him.

"Hello, Planter!" Lambert grasped the black hand. "Hello, George Morton!"

That was all. Lambert went away, but George knew what he really said was:

"It's only what you've made of yourself that counts."

At Princeton they kept him in the infirmary for a few days, but he didn't like it. It filled him with a growing fear. Since it made no particular difference how long he was ill, they let him see too many callers.

After that she didn't enter the conversation much, and again George sensed, with a reluctant thrill, a maternal darning in her heart for him. "You never ought to have gone back in the second half," Betty said. "If I hadn't," he laughed, "who would have taken care of Lambert Planter for you?"

Dinner Stories

Samuel Gompers, apropos of certain contemplated wage reductions, said in a Chicago interview:

"These employers, remind me in their arguments of the young wife."

"What?" said the young wife's husband. "Another new summer outfit? Holy smoke, Mary!"

Again she felt his longing but hesitant gaze upon her averted face. She flashed him a fleeting look of encouragement.

"What?" said the young wife's husband. "Where did you get it?"

"I sold," said the young wife, "your fur-lined overcoat."

They sat together, total strangers, on the narrow seat of a Fifth avenue bus.

She was beautiful and conscious of it. And she felt his eyes upon her. She turned her lovely head and met his gaze. It was good to look upon, dark and virile, and in his clear eyes was a look of question and pleading. She turned away, her young blood thrilling with the premonition of romance and adventure.

"Hello!" said the latter pleasantly. "were you looking for me?"

"Yes," replied Sandy. "I was looking for you, but I didn't want to find you."
